

THE DEFENSE OPENS FIGHT TO HALT MILLER'S FABER TRIAL

Scharton Demands Change of Venue, Separate Trial for Abe; Wants Names of His Aids and Alienists Kept Secret

In the jail in more privacy than has heretofore been permitted.

Uses Ely's Address to Support Motion

He will ask that the identity of the legal and medical men joining in the defense be kept secret, he said.

Scharton also said that in support of his motion he would present a copy of Gov. Ely's address to the Legislature on police matters, which, the attorney claimed yesterday, inflamed the public mind against the three men awaiting trial for the murder of two policemen during the Needham bank robbery.

Both attorneys were expected to ask funds for the hire of defense assistants.

Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing indicated he would oppose every defense move. The defense had high hopes, however, of winning a postponement of the trial.

Judge Brown notified all counsel he would be on the bench at 2 o'clock.

None of the defendants was taken from Dedham jail to hear the motion argued. The Millers and Faber, and Murion Miller's young wife Norma, eagerly awaited the outcome.

Norma, who is to be tried as an accessory after the Needham Trust Co. robbery, during which the Miller-Faber gang is alleged to have slain two policemen, also awaited trial from her divorced father and mother, Rev. Norman Brighton and Mrs. Margaret Smith Brighton, and from her own attorney, George A. Douglas.

Faber declined to reveal his plans for the Millers' defense. He said he would not name his assistants in the defense until tomorrow.

Whether the Millers will dispute the purported confession of Faber still is not known, until the trial starts. This confession, which Faber's attorney, William R. Ely, announced in a letter, was allegedly obtained, was the central issue in another battle, and there were indications it would be made use of in Faber's insanity defense.

Scharton Takes His Fight to Dewing

Scharton was refused a copy of it by Gen. Daniel Needham, state police head. The attorney then appealed to Dist. Atty. Dewing.

The Norfolk County prosecutor was losing no moments in preparation of his case. He was waiting to go into court to oppose the new motions for delay he considered in his office with state Detectives Joseph Ferrari and Michael Fleming, Capt. Charles A. Van Amburgh, state police ballistics expert, and Edward J. Seibell, who acts in a like capacity for the Boston police.

The Briggs law, which Scharton said he would attack on the ground of unconstitutionality, provides for the examination of defendants charged with murder before trial. Under it, Dr. Vernon Briggs, his mother, and Dr. Earl Holt have examined Faber and the Millers. The results of their examination have not yet been filed with the court.

Scharton claimed that from 1880 until the recent adoption of the Briggs law, a murder defendant had a right to separate trial by jury on the question of his sanity. If the defense raised the issue, trial in such cases was by a jury of six.

Atty. Harvey said that both Allyn Albert E. MacKusick and Ida Fendel were "out" as far as he was concerned, and that he would pick his own associates in the defense counsel.

Judge Set Precedent In Visit to Jail

Both MacKusick and Miss Fendel had been engaged by Joseph Miller, father of the two men in Dedham jail.

It was due to the inability of the Millers to agree upon their chief counsel that Judge Brown made a unprecedented visit to the Millers in the jail yesterday, and then selected their defender for them.

This was the first time in Massachusetts legal history that the court appointed one attorney to defend two men in a capital case, it was said.

Shortly after a long conference with his associates, state police and Judge Brown, last night, Dewing announced that he had no reason to change the plans he had made for starting the trial a week from next Monday.

Atty. Harvey's appointment by Judge Brown, and his apparent willingness that he would win a delay was pointed out to Dist. Atty. Dewing.

ing he was too busy. Again yesterday overtures were made to him by Atty. MacKusick, but this time the answer was just as definite and final.

In explaining how he had entered the Miller case as well as why he had entered it, Atty. MacKusick issued the following statement today:

"At the earnest solicitation of Joseph Miller, father of Irving and Murion Miller, who had been the client of the firm of MacKusick and Wenzel for many years, I reluctantly entered the case and allowed myself to become the defense attorney."

"Subsequently, after deep consideration, I refused to act as defense counsel. I pleaded with Mr. Miller, repeatedly calling at my office and home, and finally challenged my loyalty to an old client in his darkest hour."

"Under the circumstances I could do nothing but agree to remain in the case."

Scharton May Call Ely as Witness

"Without compensation and spending my own money, I worked tirelessly in the preparation of the defense. When I first learned that there was a division of opinion in the family regarding the accused, I emphatically notified Joseph Miller that I would continue only upon the condition that it was the unanimous wish of the Miller family that I should do so."

"The criminal charges which the Millers must face at the present time involve more than the issue of their innocence or guilt."

"Society is confronted with and cannot escape its fundamental duty of considering exhaustively the deeper and underlying causes, psychological, sociological, economic, which are dominant in the study of crime as a problem."

If guilty, the Millers will receive the penalty of their transgressions. But it is important to a civilized people that in the administration of justice the engaged feeling and aroused public opinion shall not impede or confuse the aims of that justice in its treatment of the accused, a fair and impartial trial."

There was a possibility that Gov. Ely would be drawn into the Miller case, according to Atty. Scharton.

JOSEPH MILLER

A moment after this photograph was taken in Dedham jail yard, Joseph Miller, father of two accused bandit brothers, raised his head and greeted Saul Messinger, state witness against his sons. Messinger, out for a walk, ignored him and strode on. Messinger was Murion Miller's boyfriend friend. He claims Murion confessed killings and banditry to him.

Bride Shows Wifely Interest in His Defense; Counts Days to Trial and Hopes for Delay

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Although jail bars separate them under a single roof, in heart they are still man and wife and Norma today felt the joy that was Murion's in that his defense counsel had been appointed by the court and the lines of his fight comprehensively begun.

When they told Norma that George Stanley Harvey, former assistant district attorney of Middlesex County, had taken complete charge of Murion and Irving's fight for life, the bride, herself accused of murder in a sensational trial, evidenced great happiness.

"I was worried about Murion," she told jurors. "But thank heavens, the judge took matters in his own hand and Murion is getting a break."

Norma makes many inquiries of the jailers whether or not her husband would have to stand trial on the scheduled date, March 26.

ACTS AS TRUE WIFE

She was the true wife, setting the part, attempting to get the minutest detail of the judge's conference with her husband and his brother in their cells, preliminary to his appointing counsel for them.

She wanted to know what Judge Nelson P. Brown, before whom she was arraigned last Saturday, had to say to the boys, and what the boys had to say to him. But the conference was private.

Norma, however, told the jailers she thought "it was so nice of the judge to see Murion and Irving." She told them she was more at ease now and that she sincerely felt that Atty. Harvey would do everything in his power to free her husband from the electric chair into which the government hopes to place them for the murder of two Needham police officers.

Yesterday she will see the many visitors who went to see her husband. And, curiously not only being permitted to see her husband, but also to see Atty. Harvey, she sought information from the guards.

Today she will receive a complete account of what has transpired from both her mother and father, since Norma cannot read newspapers.

She will be told that, in a move unprecedented in the annals of the Massachusetts courts, Judge Brown visited Murion and Irving behind the bars of the Dedham jail, heard their expressed wishes regarding an attorney for defense, and then appointed Atty. Harvey to assume complete charge.

She will learn that Atty. Harvey's first move will be to ask for a postponement of trial date. Of course, this will mean that Norma's trial will be heard later, since she is to stand trial as an accessory after the fact of robbery ten days after the trial of her husband.

Without knowing any more about the physical appearance—Norma is completely satisfied with the man who, through appointment by the court, must fight for her husband's life. "I'll do all right for Murion," she knows he will. Norma consoled to herself.

Norma was quoted as having said yesterday when she cried—cried March 15:

"Eleven more days and Murion will be going to the courthouse. It won't be long now. Before we know it, the trial will be over—then what?"

"The 'then what' naturally wasn't answered for it is the question that confuses up not only Norma's mind, but in the minds and hearts of her husband, her brother and their friend, a changing picture of frightful hopes."

SOCIETY BRIDE SELENT ABOUT HER CHARGES

Romance Which Budded in Air Crashes on Rocky Discord

A romance of the skies was grounded, it was learned today when news came from Reno that Mrs. Lillias Sherfield Moriarty Snow, wealthy wife of Lieut. Crocker Snow, Boston aviator, had arrived there three weeks ago on Feb. 23 and planned to seek a divorce on the completion of the required six weeks' residence.

Plans for the divorce suit were revealed today by Albert Ayres, attorney for Mrs. Snow. She has maintained a strict silence since she reached the Nevada unblinking post, and even today refused to add a word of comment to the lawyer's brief announcement that a suit, charging mental cruelty, would be filed.

"FINEST SPORTSWOMAN"
The wedding of the couple in the fall of 1921 was one of the major events on the Younger Set's social calendar. The bride was well known in the smart circles of Newport, New York and Brookline. The ceremony was performed on her father's estate at Bristol, R. I. It was a comparatively simple affair because of the illness of her parents at the time.

ROMANCE OF THE AIR
It was through aviation that the couple met. Snow taught his bride-to-be to fly and made her one of the outstanding members of the Prop and Wing Club of New England.

The flying lessons quickly developed into a romance that came to a climax with an aerial honeymoon after the wedding in the Bristol home of the G. Andrews Moriarty.

Snow could not be reached at his lawyers today for comment on his wife's divorce plans.

It was Snow who piloted the plane from which Mark Ridge, Doncaster youth who is now planning an ascent into the stratosphere, claims to fall into the Charles river years ago. Snow, at the time accused Ridge of attempting a stunt parachute jump.

FIREMAN DIES IN CHURCH FIRE

Holyoke, March 15.—Fire Capt. James J. Sullivan dropped dead early today while directing his company in battling a two-alarm fire which destroyed St. Jerome's Roman Catholic Church with a loss of $125,000.

During the vain battle to save the structure, built three-quarters of a century ago and the oldest church in the Springfield diocese, Hoseman John Gersbach was severely injured when struck on the head by a beam.

He was removed to Providence Hospital where he is under treatment of Dr. William P. Ryan, a fire commissioner.

Despite the raging flames which melted stained glass windows as if they had been wax, the Rev. Major John F. Fagan, pastor of the mother church of the diocese, and a number of his curates rescued sacred vessels and vestments from the sacristy just before it collapsed.

FIRE OPERATION IN BYRD CAMP
Little America, Antarctic, March 15 (AP)—(By Mackay Radio)—A fire damaged the administration building of the Byrd Antarctic expedition today and a few hours later an appendectomy was formed upon Joseph A. Peller, U. S. naval aerial cameraman.

The gasoline tank in the shaft of the building caught fire. Four members of the expedition put out the blaze and rescued the surgical instruments of Dr. Louis H. Potaka which were in a crate under the flaming tank.

This quick action probably saved Peller's life. When the operation was performed by Dr. Potaka, it was discovered that a rupture of the appendix probably would have occurred in a short time.

Father Burns Son in Heater

Akron, O., March 15 (AP)—Detectives asked Howard K. Gross today why he thrust his son into a glowing furnace. They quoted him as replying:

"I sacrificed my boy because the Lord told me to."

Blinded John Gross, two, was the victim. He died in a hospital here.

Gross, 34, a hardware merchant, returned home yesterday from a hospital, where he recuperated from injuries after an auto accident.

Telling his wife, Elsie, he wanted to clean the mud off his shoes, he went into the cellar, taking the child with him.

"As you came over him," he said, and he thrust the boy into the furnace.

EARHART URGES PRIVATE LINES FOR AIR MAIL

Atlantic Flier Claims Army Should Center on Preparedness

Air mail carrying should be turned back to private companies and the Army should concentrate on aviation as a defense and offense, it was declared today at the Copley-Piazza by Amelia Earhart Putnam, only woman to fly the Atlantic solo.

In an interview with the Boston Evening American after she drove over the road from Providence to speak today at a Copley-Piazza luncheon of the New England shipper's advisory board, the flier asserted that air mail carrying by private companies had given the nation excellent service.

"By this," she said, "I do not mean the army is incapable of carrying the mails, but it has always secured itself with other forms of flying."

"You see, the army won't be a fair weather war, and army flying has been and should continue to concentrate on aviation as a defense and offense in preparation for war."

"One good that the army has gained is the retraining of army training, with more versatility. Thus far civilian training has been better, and in that way it is unfair to criticize."

The former aviator said she did not care to comment on the stand taken by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh on the aerial matter, but turned instead to the matter of her lunch address on coordination between carriers in transportation.

"Aviation," she said in this regard, "is here to stay and as a carrier it is indispensable. With the merging of aviation with other carriers, transportation will greatly improve."

Montreal, March 15.—One of the leading American residents of Montreal, Major W. H. Wadsworth, 50, a consulting engineer, is dead here.

DL LINGER PAL IN FLIGHT SLAIN
Port Huron, Mich., March 15 (AP)—Herbert Youngblood, partner of John Dillinger in his escape from the Crown Point, Ind., jail a fortnight ago, died in a hospital here this afternoon.

He died of bullet wounds in the chest and abdomen shortly after he had been identified by Capt. Matt Leach of the Indiana state police, thereby spurring a search for Dillinger, desperado and bank robber.

Youngblood, facing a murder charge for a Gary, Ind., slaying, admitted his identity as he lay dying from bullet wounds inflicted in the un battle, in which Sheriff William L. Van Antwerp and two deputies also were wounded.

He was the companion of the slain Dillinger, who was shot in the left arm while he was in a Ford V-8 automobile with three other men.

Sheriff Van Antwerp had been told right at a Negro in South Port Huron boasting of a jail break and carrying a gun. This morning he traced him to the store. It was while the Negro was being questioned that he opened fire and Under-Sheriff Charles Cavanaugh and Deputy Howard

Fairbanks and Son Start Rome Trip
London, March 15 (AP)—The famous Fairbanks—father and son—quietly departed from London today for a fortnight's trip to Rome and Algiers.

Toronto, March 15 (AP)—Martin J. Insull, former Chicago utilities operator and brother of Samuel Insull, today was ordered extradited to the United States.

The order of extradition was passed by Chief Justice Sir William McKeen on Insull's appeal from an extradition order previously issued.

INSULL CAUGHT; MUST RETURN TO U. S. NOW
Immediate Expulsion Looms as Flight Stirrs Greek Ire
Athens, March 15 (AP)—Samuel Insull, Sr., who was found today aboard the Greek freighter Maitelis, will be expelled directly to the United States, the Greek government let it be known.

Angry because of his coup in attempting to sneak away from Greece, the government has decided to return Insull to America where he will face charges of embezzlement and larceny.

The Maitelis is proceeding to Piraeus, port of Athens, where it is expected to arrive tomorrow.

SHIPS SOON TO SAIL
Two ships sail shortly to America and it was held likely that the 74-year-old fugitive, who battled for nearly 15 months to escape return, would be charged with embezzlement.

Previously, the government had planned means to send Insull from Greece, allowing him to go where he wished to search for refuge.

The government was represented as "fighting mad" because Insull's legal pit in an embarrassing light by his secret maritime dash, Wednesday afternoon.

The Aquilons sailed the 20th and the Italian steamer Vulcanus will pick up passengers for America at Piraeus, March 24.

Although the Maitelis was steaming back to Piraeus, it was held in course, ordered by the Greek government in a wireless message, until it reaches port.

PUBLIC IS FEEVED
Not only has the government's temper soured toward the man who stayed here nearly 15 months battling extradition, but the public also is nettled.

Public sympathy, much of it with the Chicagoans, apparently has turned to open resentment.

After 24 hours of questioning by police, who sought to know as they could about her husband, Mrs. Insull was released from custody late this afternoon.

The police immediately afterward arrested the owner of the S. S. Maitelis (listed in Lloyd's Register as A. P. Blundinos of Piraeus).

Army Not Ready to Fly Mail, Lindbergh Tells Senate

"Read a statement if you have one," said Mr. McCellar. "Do just as you please."

"I have no prepared statement," Senator Lindbergh said. "I believe the bill (now pending) leaves untouched the most fundamental question—whether these lines have a right to be kept before their gulf is established."

"The contracts have already been cancelled," continued McCellar. "The question is what will be instead of them. We would like to get in your view on this bill."

"HOST UNJUST ACT"

Senator Barbour said he felt Lindbergh was speaking about a section of the bill relating to the cancelled contracts.

Criticizing the provisions which discriminate in future bidding against the companies that had their air mail contracts cancelled, Lindbergh said:

"As far as that particular paragraph is concerned, to my mind it is one of the most unjust acts I have ever seen in American legislation."

"As a general principle, I would have a number of suggestions to make to encourage the development of American aviation as far as possible."

PLANE SIZE DISCUSSED

"The suggestions I now make are in regard to technical details," said Senator Barbour. "He then said he would encourage use of large planes whenever it is possible to them."

"I think it would be advantageous to aviation to make no limit on the size of aircraft where the traffic exists," said Lindbergh. "I think it would be disadvantageous to aviation to limit size."

ATTACKS SAFETY RULES

Lindbergh said the safety requirements of the bill are inadequate.

"The question of range is important," he said. "There are many cases in which the range of the airplane, the distance they can travel without refueling, is a really important safety factor."

"There is the question of law."

Senator Hayden (D) of Arizona asked him to suggest where the change in the text of the bill.

"That isn't my field," said the senator. "I'm not familiar with legislation."

Lindbergh pointed out a practical limitation on the air mail load that could be carried under the bill—namely that no member of the committee apparently had noticed. He called attention to the clause prescribing a maximum rate of 30 cents per airplane mile for the first 30 pounds; and not exceeding six cents for each additional 20 pounds.

TELLS ARMY'S FAULTS

Sen. Gibson (R) of Vermont took up the questioning.

"It has been claimed that the Army has failed in carrying the mail. If you are of that opinion will you give reasons?"

"The Army has not been as efficient in carrying the mail as the commercial lines were. The Army had only 10 days to take over routes the commercial lines have been carrying for years. The Army lacks the equipment needed for this work. I know if I went back on my old route from St. Louis to Chicago, I would have trouble flying it. It would take me months to be able to fly it."

"If only want to call your attention to the fact that the life of a transport plane is five or six years and that might leave the line with planes only half used," he said.

McCellar explained that the renual of contracts after three years would be determined by the Interstate Commerce Commission. He said he felt the lines would be cancelled fairly.

"I only wanted to call your attention to it," said Lindbergh.

OFFERED TO L. C. C.

Lindbergh was opposed to giving the L. C. C. control over aviation. He said he felt a separate commission should be given control of aviation.

"I only want to make a suggestion that any commission given control of aviation should be separated from railroad and any other form of transportation," he declared.

McCellar said, "Just to make our record complete are you interested in any of the companies that had contracts cancelled?"

Lindbergh replied that he has served several years as technical adviser to Transcontinental Western Air, Inc. and Pan American Airways. He said he received a salary of $6000 from Transcontinental Western Airways and $10,000 a year from Pan American Airways.

"That seems like a very modest salary," said Senator Barbour.

"You might have gotten a much larger salary in some other office due to your great popularity."

"I feel more interested in aviation than anything else, sir," said Lindbergh.

"PERSONNEL INJURED"

"I take it that it requires quite as long to take the personnel," Senator Barbour said.

"That is quite true. The building up of morale is one of the most important phases of aviation," Lindbergh replied.

"Then this breaking down of personnel is the most serious part of this cancellation?"

"Yes, except that the cancellation of these contracts without giving the companies a right to be heard is to my mind one of the most serious things that could happen. America had built up the most efficient commercial aviation industry in the world. I believe it will take years to rebuild the industry to the same point of efficiency."

"How does American commercial aviation compare to that abroad?"

"Our service is much better. The performance of our planes is in advance of the performance over there. If can conservatively be said that American commercial aviation is superior to that abroad."

SILENT ON BROWN

Lindbergh refused to comment on the aviation policies of former Postmaster General Walter F. Brown.

McCellar interrupted:

"Was there competition in the bidding for these routes?"

"I know nothing about that."

"But there was keen competition in service?"

"A—In everything I had anything to do with there was keen competition."

McCellar then asked whether the contracts in which Lindbergh is interested would be affected by provisions of the bill.

"I'm not sure how the bill affects the contracts," said Lindbergh.

"Were you present when these contracts were awarded?"

"No, I was not."

"I only would defend these contracts only if they were honorable and legal?"

"A—No, I am only defending the right of trial."

"You would oppose these contracts if they were fraudulent and illegal?"

"That was what he had a right to expect," said McCellar. "It does credit to you as a citizen."

OFFERS SMALL UNITS

To the suggestion that contracts for transcontinental service might be broken up between several small companies, Lindbergh said "several small units can not give the same service as a few larger units."

"If a great number of contracts were let, it would decrease service and complicate technical features."

"I expect that soon passengers will be able to cross the continent without stop."

"Do you know, O'Mahoney asked, that the company with which you are associated paid another company $1,600,000 not to bid on an air mail award?"

"I have absolutely no knowledge of that."

REFUSES TO ANSWER

"But if it were true you wouldn't approve it?"

"I don't feel with my background," Lindbergh said, "that I should make any comment on the question."

"If an officer of your company testified under oath that his concern paid $1,600,000 to persuade another company not to bid, would you consider that proof of the charge?"

"That's a hypothetical question," Lindbergh said, "and it is out of my field. I don't want to answer that."

3 DROWN AS AUTO DIVES INTO RIVER

North Wiltbraham, March 16.—The sister-in-law of Palmer's chief of police and her two daughters were drowned here when their sedan plunged from the road after a collision at the foot of Butler's Hill and crashed through the ice of Chelapee river.

Victims of the accident were Mrs. Edward Crimmins, 66, wife of the brother of Chief Timothy J. Crimmins, of Palmer, and her daughters, Alice, 26, and Ellen, 24, all of Ware rd., Palmer.

They were returning home, after spending the evening at a Springfield theater, when their sedan crashed into a machine operated by Nazaire J. Fourrier, of Chelapee Falls, and plunged off the road. Fourrier and two occupants of his machine were unhurt, and immediately summoned police and assisted in the efforts to raise the car.

According to their story the sedan, after the collision, crashed through the fence at the roadside, plunged down an embankment and onto the thick ice on the river. It skidded along the ice for 75 feet before it finally crashed through and sank in about 12 feet of water.

State troopers finally secured dynamite and blasted the ice to clear a channel to the shore by which the mangled machine could be dragged above the water.

DOG REVIVALS STIR HOPES

Berkeley, Calif., March 16 (AP).—Two dead dogs brought back to life by the magic of science gave a doctor hope today that human life may be restored.

Not that the goal is immediately in sight. The operation was a partial success but the two dogs died all over again.

Dr. Robert E. Corning, biologist of the University of California, directed the experiments yesterday. The dogs were asphyxiated with nitrogen gas and pronounced dead.

Then injections of Adrenalin, Heparin and Oxygen were administered, combined with a "resuscitator" device to restore the circulation of the blood. The doctor said that heart action and respiration were restored. One dog lived again for four hours. Another came back for five hours.

The trouble with the dogs, Dr. Corning said, was that on their return journey they didn't seem to take an interest in things. Neither appeared to regain consciousness. He hopes that, if successful, the knowledge can be applied to revive persons struck dead by electric shocks, heart attacks and other similar causes.

Milton school buses travelled to Milton high today under a police guard as a result of the firing of one of the buses during the school disorders yesterday. Norman Gunnison, Fred McCarthy, Mary Jones and Maria Kwart are just four of the pupils attending classes despite the uproar in the building. (Boston American photo.)

25 Milton High Strikers Face Grill in School

Pupils were orderly in the buses and attended their classes punctually today and there was no disturbance in the corridors between classes.

Mardon said the crux of the trouble was a $2000 sinking fund that has been acquired by the school. A number of the pupils and their parents, too, have demanded that this sum be used to reduce food prices in the cafeteria.

The principal, however, said he will not allow the already low prices. Such a move would eat up the sinking fund in a few months and leave the school helpless in the face of a real emergency. He pointed out that a "hot plate" is now as "hot" for only 6 cents; a glass of milk costs 3 cents and butter sandwiches may be had for 21 cents cream costs a nickel and cookies may be had for an extra penny.

A telegram declared to be from Albert Fletcher, president of the seniors and a baseball star, now receiving a tryout with the Boston Braves, was read.

This telegram, appealing to the senior class to "lay off" the disturbances, received a preponderance of cheers and some boos.

SPRING BLANK
Two of Milton's school committee members, James G. Russell, chairman, and Joseph Gossytery, visited the school today with superintendent Horace F. Turner. Turner said he believed the disturbances were due to spring.

"It's been an awfully hard winter," he said. "We've had a lot of cold and snow, and with spring coming on, the boys and girls must find an outlet somehow."

Principal Mardon, however, attributed the uprising to the influence of disturbances at other schools, particularly at Melrose high school.

School sweaters are now asked for everybody who tries out for a sports team; also later dancing hours, the last bell an hour earlier, and a more varied cafeteria diet.

The principal also demands represent only the views of a small handful of the student body and that he expected the whole affair "to die a natural death."

Because of his liberal attitude, comparative calm prevailed in the "war zone" but it was hardly admitted on all sides that it was an armed truce.

After yesterday's attempt to fire a school bus, those vehicles were

RICKENBACKER HAS PUSHCART TO TAKE LOOT

Detroit, March 16 (U.S.)—President Roosevelt should use his emergency executive powers to commandeer the private armfuls of loot into service, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker declared today.

The commercial aviation industry of America is determined to carry every hour like a pile of loot, Capt. Rickenbacker said. "Unless something is done quickly, I promise you that inside of a year there will be no private commercial airplanes."

The flyer declared today he believed the confiscation of armfuls of loot was the first "glaring blunder" of the Roosevelt administration—a blunder, he said, which has already had its political repercussions in damaged confidence and the "revolt" of Congress on the bonus and the St. Lawrence railway questions.

Norma Happy While at Beach

By MRS. MARGARET SMITH BRIGHTON

father's home in Natick, came to me in the summer of her 16th year and had what she has always described as the happiest season in her life.

Daily she swam and rode, and promptly she won the attention of all the nice boys on the island. I thought her two lovely dresses and she has never been happier nor looked more beautiful in all the years of her life.

In view of all the attention she received from the lads who in a boyish way paid court to her I was for a time worried, as the mother of any young girl must be in this day and age when her daughter reaches maturity and has genuine beauty. Always she confided so readily and so freely in me that I was promptly reassured. She delighted in telling me every detail of her experience with admirers, and she talked with a fine, girlish candor when I sought to advise her. It was perfectly clear that the boys knew she was a good girl and that they were fortunately fine boys themselves.

Much has been said about Norma's love of clothes. It has been indicated that she willingly, or even determinedly, entered into the most terrible conspiracies because of an irrefragable desire to possess clothing and jewelry.

Up to the time that Norma possessed and delighted in these two pretty and inexpensive dresses which she wore at Nantasket Island, I never remember her having any but the most ordinary clothing. She could improve so that the most ordinary scarfs, and even simple aprons, looked becoming after that period in which she was operated upon and won back to health.

For the three years preceding her marriage, I know that clothes were always a problem with her. Not that she was demanding, for really Norma has always been infinitely patient in her consideration of what might be her due in that matter of clothing, money or any other possession.

Among the children it was a standing joke that Norma was always a problem with her. Not that she was demanding, for really Norma has always been infinitely patient in her consideration of what might be her due in that matter of clothing, money or any other possession.

Yes, she enjoyed a few months of her unimpaired happiness. I believe that no one will question that she has paid, and must pay a terrible price for this brief interlude of happiness.

And in the midst of it let me explain something that can be readily proved. Despite these new possessions and a feeling of security such as she had not known for many years, she gave unflinching evidence of her love for me in a way which won comment in the home of Murt Millen's parents.

"Your daughter certainly loves you," said Mrs. Millen to me, on more than one occasion, "no matter how good Murt's business is or what he tells her about the presents he intends to give her when they have lots of money, she always interrupts him to go in the wall where your picture hangs to take it down and give it a kiss. It seems that every time she's happy she thinks of you."

Never in my life did I give my daughter other than the best advice that a thoughtful and well-intentioned mother could give a daughter. Do you believe that when, in the few months of happily carrying my picture to the type of mad activities with which she has been recklessly and without foundation accused?

Tomorrow, Mrs. Brighton will tell of the days when Norma Brighton was the "prettiest girl in Natick High."

PRESIDENT HEARS BOB UP PICK MEMORIAL SCRIPT

Roosevelt, in Accepting Chairmanship,
Calls for 'Good, Simple Anglo-Saxon'
Words in Mountain Carving

Washington, March 16 (US)—President Roosevelt has accepted the chairmanship of the national committee that will determine the character of the inscription to be carved on the west wall of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial in South Dakota.

The President consented to serve in reply to an invitation extended by Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, and a group of senators who called at the White House.

A national competition, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and associated news papers, is being conducted to select an inscription for the memorial.

The final character of the inscription will be determined by the committee on which President Roosevelt consented to serve.

Mr. Roosevelt will also be invited to accept the chairmanship of the committee, in writing the inscription for the memorial, but will not be asked to select the words, simple Anglo-Saxon words. There should not be a single word of Latin derivation in the inscription. The simple it is worded the better it will tell the story.

The committee includes: Senators Norbeck and Dwyer of South Dakota, Sheppard and Connally of Texas, McNary of Oregon, Johnson of California, Pittman of Nevada, and Cushing of New Mexico; Rep. Isabelle Greenway of Arizona, Mrs. Mary Ramsey, Margaret, chairman of the Mt. Rushmore commission; Robert Sprout, president of the University of California; Dr. Julian A. C. Chandler, president of Williams and Morrow College, and Borglum.

The senators were selected to represent those territories like the Louisiana purchase, the Republic of Texas and the Oregon Territory, which were acquired in the great westward expansion of the country, Borglum said.

"This memorial is commemorating the human development which took over naturally and logically these great territories," in explaining why women were asked to serve on the committee, Borglum said.

"For historical reasons and from the fact that probably 50 per cent of the inscriptions will be written by women, it is considered appropriate that there should be at least three women outstanding in the affairs and culture of the nation, present on the final committee and to take part in the final decision."

Borglum was accompanied to the White House by Senators McNary, Johnson, Pittman, Connally and Cushing.

Borglum said the President and his committee, in accepting the invitation of the Mt. Rushmore National Memorial Commission, unanimously expressed the belief that the competition, sponsored by the Boston Evening American and associated news papers, is a commendable effort to capture for posterity America's own viewpoint of the national achievements.

Announcement of the President's acceptance was made at the White House by Borglum, the sculptor of the memorial, who said President Roosevelt told him:

HALF HOUR AT WHITE HOUSE
This great idea must stress one thing above all else—and every competitor for the honor of inscribing the memorial must bear in mind that the pioneering spirit—the creative urge which led our people to populate the various areas which from this time came to be known as the nation was of far more importance than any territorial growth. The spiritual development inherent in such movement was the vital and essential thing. If those who seek to write the permanent memorial of America's greatness should emphasize that thought in their interpretations, we shall probably have—not one—but several really great texts from which to choose."

Rushmore Contest Draws Millions

Millions of pens—scratching busily throughout American—trying to capture—in 600 perfect words—the spirit of this nation's greatness.

That is the sketchy outline of the nationwide competition to secure for the use of the Mt. Rushmore National Memorial Commission, an apt suitable inscription high on the western slope of the mountain of granite in Dakota's Black Hills.

COLLEGE JOIN TEST
New England is well represented in this national contest. College classes in English are making of it a regular assignment. And the same is true of high school and grammar school classrooms.

Prizes and topics that will appeal to all ages are found elsewhere on this page.

Already articles are being submitted. One has come in from a 15-year-old girl, another from a 70-year-old man. Civic and social centers in a body are entering the contest. National patriotic organizations have already expressed their intention of entering the lists to secure the brief, succinct spirit of America. But of course various boards must be met and many committees must be named before their announcements can be official.

Many letters have come in asking for news of the competition. And although the first efforts are coming in, there is no rush. There is plenty of time.

Time for you to read in the Boston Evening American some new fact which may help you to form your own thought on the nine epochs which constitute the material of the text. Time to read everyone of the special articles on the various epochs, especially written for the Boston Evening American for your benefit.

SIMPLER THE BETTER
Every school child will want to read the special announcement of the American in a day or two. Helpful hints to every public and parochial grade school student will be contained at that time.

And word advice—Write simply, directly, Be clear and accurate. If you are that in your writing you will be practically perfect.

Following is the complete list of prizes and awards for the competition inaugurated by the Herald newspapers in connection with the inscription for the Mount Rushmore National Memorial.

3 NEGROES DIE FAKE PUSHES ON GALLOWS HOME BUILDING

Hernando, Miss., March 16 (AP)—Three young Memphis Negroes died on the gallows here today for a criminal assault on a 17-year-old girl.

Two hundred National Guardsmen, who rushed the Negroes here from Jackson, Miss., jet surrounded the prison to hold back a huge throng of John Jones, Ernest McGehee and Isaac Howard were executed.

Howard and McGehee, first to die, went to their deaths singing religious songs, but Jones did not utter a word.

The hanging was witnessed by Clyde Collins of Holly Springs, N.C., father of the attack victim. A bill which would have permitted him to spring the trap was killed by a House committee after being passed by the Senate.

3 Men Are Held in Woman Attack
A charge by Mrs. Helen Quigley, 40, of Randall st., Roxbury, that she was attacked by three men today in the basement of a building in Albany st., Roxbury, resulted in a few hours later in the arrest of three Roxbury men at suspects.

Mrs. Quigley was sent to City Hospital for treatment as a result of the alleged attack.

Washington, March 16 (INB)—The Administration was disquieted today in considering two far-reaching proposals to spend home building.

The proposals include purchase of preferred stock in established private building and loan associations and a division of the proposed intermediate credit banks for industry to make construction loans.

Christmas John H. Fahay of the Federal Home Loan Bank informed Congress members that a close study now is being made by the Federal Emergency Council of the purchase of preferred stock in private building and loan associations.

Conferees have been in progress between leading builders and representatives of the administration on means of making huge government loans to spur building construction of all kinds.

Two Boy Bandits Hold Up Store
Two boy bandits, each carrying a nickel-plated revolver, forced a store in Winthrop at Roxbury into a closet today, robbing the cash register of $60 and $100 in a car which had been parked in front of the store.

Both bandits were about 18 years old, Maguire told police.

Whiskey at 15 Cents Is Set Price
More than 100 members of the New England Beverage Dealers Association have voted in favor of a minimum price of 15 cents for one and one-half ounce glass of whiskey in some Boston restaurants and taverns.

It was pointed out that high rents and other overhead would make such a minimum impossible in the larger downtown restaurants and taverns. The minimum would be expected to apply in the smaller neighborhood dispensaries.

Bite of Cheese Traps Burglar
Portage, Wis., March 16 (AP)—When Sheriff Robert Roche was called to investigate the burglary of the Kirtley store at Doylestown he found only one clue—a freshly bitten piece of cheese in the showcase.

The sheriff arrested John McManis and his cousin Russell McManis, but they denied the charge. A dentist said the marks in the cheese matched John's teeth and he confessed, confessing $1500.

Treasury Seeks Bids
Washington, March 16 (AP)—Secretary Morgenthau has invited bids on $100,000,000 of 91 day Treasury bills.

NAZI CATHOLIC YOUTH WARNED
Berlin, March 16 (AP)—Rudolf von Schirach, leader of the Hitler youth movement, appealed to Catholic youth organizations today to break away from the control of their church.

In an effort to bring all German youth groups under his command, Von Schirach, through his press service, bitterly complained of the "defiant stubbornness" hampering his campaign.

Already he has obtained the dissolution of the Monarchist Youth League and the Boy Scout Association.

Demanding an explanation of the reason for their failure to place themselves under Nazi supervision, the leader declared:

"The entire nation shall pass a verdict on you which will become history."

CIVIC LEADERS IN PROTEST TO LEAGUE ENTRANCE

Petitions From All Over New England Flood Editor in Drive to Halt World Court Participation

Neighborhood stores, clubs and civic centers throughout the city have signified their approval of the petition against American participation in the League of Nations and the World Court by posting in conspicuous places, copies of the petition which elicits approbation by signatures.

The Boston Evening American, the Boston Sunday Advertiser and affiliated Hearst newspapers are leading the fight against American participation.

LEADERS ENDORSE DRIVE

Letters from storekeepers and civic leaders not only praise this campaign by endorsing the petition but they advise that copies will be posted where all may read it.

J. R. Payson of Bridgford, Me. has written approval and enclosed a petition with 28 names. Entire families are endorsing the campaign. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Somma of Rindfield have sent in 28 names all "Mr. and Mrs." showing that husband and wife can agree.

Through New England, cities and towns all are contributing toward the campaign.

Mrs. B. M. Barry of 9 Lyman st., Beverly, writes: "Enclosed find petitions which Mr. Barry and I obtained. It is a wonderful idea."

Philip P. Shannon of 93 Bedford st., Wollaston, writes: "I am enclosing the names of myself and family to reject against the United States entering in any way with the League of Nations or the World Court."

"We believe that the United States and its people are able to manage their own business. The United States have shown by their voting plainly enough how they feel in the matter. We can do very well without foreign entanglements."

PROUD TO SIGN PLEA

Thomas C. Griffin of 20 Princeton st., Medford, writes: "I have always admired that great American masterpiece, the Monroe Doctrine, which, to my way of thinking, has been ignored or perhaps forgotten by those of this generation."

"I was proud to affix my signature to one of these petitions, and I sincerely hope that your project will be a success, so that these petitions may be presented to our representatives at Washington, acquainting them with the fact that our forefathers established a nation that will live, and that the people of the nation glory in keeping sacred the doctrines handed down to them, namely, the Constitution and the Monroe Doctrine."

HEARST'S LABOR STAND PRAISED

Washington, March 18 (U.S.)—William Randolph Hearst was praised in the Senate today for his long and consistent stand for "fair play between labor and management, to the end that the interests of both might become one."

Sen. Davis (R.) of Pennsylvania, a former secretary of labor, in extolling the publisher, obtained unanimous consent of the Senate for inclusion in the Congressional Record of an editorial signed by Mr. Hearst that appears in today's Washington Herald and other Hearst newspapers under the caption:

"What Is Safer for the Goose Is Applause for the Gander."

Through the years, Mr. Hearst has stood firmly for the increase of purchasing power through well-earned pay envelopes in the hands of the workers.

"He has upheld the right of collective bargaining and high wages at times when it was unpopular to do so, until today it has become the accepted custom of the land."

"He now asks that the government practice in relation to its employees what it preaches to industry in the maintenance of living wages."

Cast Filled in Quincy Row

Cocktail row, or an cocktail row, the show must go on for the Quincy Junior Women's Club, and it was said today that three new faces will be seen in the cast depleted by resignation of the trio who wouldn't take criticism from Senior Club President Mrs. Franklin R. Nichols.

The cocktail episode took place at a junior club function which Mrs. Nichols chaperoned. She invited several to leave because they had visited other places before coming to the party.

France Fears Ire of People If Nation Incites War

Editor's Note—France will not incite a "preventive war," H. R. Knickerbocker writes from Paris in the 25th article of his series "Will War Come." Many in France believe France should make war now but cannot because French public opinion does not realize the German menace, Knickerbocker writes.

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
Copyright, 1934, by International News Service. Reproduction in whole or part forbidden.

Paris, March 10 (INS)—There will be no "preventive war," France will not incite a war she thinks she can win today against Germany in order to prevent a war she thinks she may lose tomorrow.

This is the most important statement on the side of peace that may be daily hazarded toward the end of a tour that has led through all the countries allied with France, and to the French capital itself. Reasons why such a prophecy may be hazarded, with full knowledge of the risk of prophecy, are: 1—The profound peace of the French people today. 2—The French fortifications. 3—The Polish-German non-aggression pact.

4—The uncertain stand of Italy. 5—The French desire for peace. 6—The progress Germany has already made toward disarmament. The French desire for peace is something different from that of other peoples. A French Socialist professor told me:

"Rather a German governor in Paris than a war." That is harked of war, radical, uncompromising. But it is the Frenchman to whom this statement has been quoted has explained: "The stands alone. You could not find a thousand men in France to support that stand."

On the other extreme stood a French publicist, who also claimed: "Preventive war! Impossible! I regret deeply regret to have to say it, but it is out of the question."

In the middle, representative of the small class of informed French opinion, stood a government representative who declared:

"This interpretation of the attitude of the French masses is universal. They believe, too, that their fortifications are sufficient to protect them. Yet an outside observer, a neutral, has observed that perhaps the historian of 100 years from now will remark that the decline of France dated from the building of that steel wall on its eastern and northern frontiers. Because the wall has made it impossible for the French soldier to contemplate going beyond the wall. It has made the French army permanently defensive."

Has it made the air force strictly defensive? The best authority for an answer to that question is Gen. Joseph Denain, the first professional military man to be minister of air.

Gen. Denain occupies brand new quarters in the brand new air ministry away out on the Avenue Victor. More than a city block is covered by the complex of buildings housing the School of Military Aeronautics, the Museum of Aeronautics, and the Ministry.

Better Airplanes in French Goal

Gen. Denain, in civilian clothes, is tall, dark, swarthy, polite but reserved. He listens under these circumstances. It means that the war will take place with France at as much disadvantage as Germany is today.

"We logically we ought to make war now. But we cannot. Because the French people as a whole have not the faintest idea of what the German menace means. America and British public opinion has been much better informed through their newspapers than French public opinion. In a vague way, in the back of their minds, the French masses are aware that a greater, stronger Germany is growing up on the other side of the Rhine, and they have waves of uneasiness, but they are not yet frightened enough to abandon their belief in letting tomorrow's troubles be settled tomorrow."

"That," he remarked, "sounds like a bad joke. I cannot imagine that any serious German could have contemplated such a possibility. Certainly a great and proud country like Germany could only respond to such an action by making war. We do not want war."

The French air fleet is there in defend France, to attack no one. We are trying now to improve it. In the process of re-equipment we consider quality much more important than quantity. Not more airplanes, but better ones is our goal."

The general refused to express his opinion of the probable stage German rearmament has reached in the air, but did permit himself to remark:

"The more airplanes Great Britain builds the better we like it. And, if I may say so, I should think that the more and better airplanes we build the better Great Britain ought to like it. I heartily agree with the campaign Lord Rothermere is waging for the improvement of the British air fleet. Our interests in this respect are common."

I asked the general if he believed that in the next war there would be a tacit agreement not to bombard each other's cities, or would the enemy air fleets strike at the capitals to crush civilian morale, and thus fulfill all the horrors promised for the war in the future.

He replied: "The French air fleet is not there to attack civilians but if we are attacked we shall reply in kind."

As a matter of fact French defense strategy takes a German air attack on Paris for granted. Every important French munitions work or work capable of being converted into munitions manufacturing, near Paris has been compelled by the government to establish parallel plants far south of Paris, so that in the event of disablement of the Paris plants through bombardment work could be resumed within 48 hours in the southern plants.

New Preparations For War Expected

Gen. Denain took over the French air service at a time when it was notorious that its material was largely obsolete. His three year plan contemplates almost complete renewal of existing equipment, installation of heavy oil motors; supercharged engines, variable pitch propellers, folding landing gear. It will cost around $300,000,000 yearly.

"It is intended," he declared, "to make the French air fleet capable of repelling any possible attack. We shall make no agreement with permit none against us."

The general's statements, discounting the obvious necessity for a minister to emphasize defense, contribute to the local French picture. No preventive war.

In any case even if the French had wanted to make a preventive war, the defection of Poland reduced the chances for it to the vanishing point. For it may be that Poland would still help France if Germany attacked France, but Poland could scarcely now help France attack Germany.

Furthermore the Italian attitude toward France will not be completely friendly until and unless the Nazis take Austria. The British are morally and selfishly indisposed to make a preventive war for the sake of France.

Finally, all sides have recognized that Germany after a year's Hitler is much tougher meat than she was a year ago and that any attempt to take "sanctions" against her would mean an adult conflict.

General Denain's observations support the conclusion that most observers have reached, that the next developments in Europe may very well be a free hand to Germany plus strong argument upward in France and England. In other words, not war, but the preparations for it.

Tomorrow—"We do not want war but if it comes we are prepared," French Foreign Minister, Barthou tells Knickerbocker.

OTTO'S RETURN AGAIN HINTED

Vienna, March 10—Tensions occupying the former Imperial Palace, seat of emperor of Hapsburg rule, were ordered today to clear out before the end of the summer, and a newspaper was confiscated at Graz for disparaging remarks about Archduke Otto, exiled claimant to the Austrian throne.

These two apparently unconnected circumstances coincided with the closing of the two-day conference of Heimwehr leaders, held under Prince Ernst von Starhemberg in the absence of Chancellor Dollfuss, who is in Rome. A communiqué was issued denouncing Governor Ender of Vorarlberg for removing a Heimwehr official.

The Governor was Minister for Constitutional Reform in the Dollfuss cabinet.

All this revives hints of two weeks ago that Otto will return to be crowned.

"DON'T LET ANYBODY TELL YOU THAT RUNNING AN OFFICE DOESN'T TAKE HEALTHY NERVES, TOO, MR. JAFFEE —"

John W. Grout, Office Manager, who hails from Detroit, Mich., says:

"I can see how an Olympic champion speed skater needs healthy nerves, but just let me say something here that is also true—a man can't handle a tough office job without healthy nerves, either. Many hours of nagging details and the pressure of a heavy load of work tell on the nerves, if they are inclined to be 'jumpy.' I smoke Camels steadily...all day long...and I never even have to think of nerves. As for taste—Camels have the finest flavor I have ever known."

How Are YOUR Nerves?

Sooner or later today most of us come face to face with jangled nerves.

If nerves are a problem with you, now is the time to check up on all habits that may affect them—your eating, your sleeping, your recreation. And get a fresh slant on your smoking by trying Camels. Much is heard about tobacco quality, so always remember this:

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand.

Note the way "edgy" nerves become a thing of the past. You can smoke more than ever, without a sign of "cigarette" aftertaste. You'll be delighted to find that Camel's costlier tobaccos do make a difference—to your taste and to your nerves!

The Life of Our Lord--By Charles Dickens

(The literary event of the current century is the publication here for the first time of this manuscript by Charles Dickens for which $200,000 was paid. Written for his children in 1849, it is now given to the public. Kept as a precious family secret for 84 years, it is now released only upon his expressed wish that it be printed only after death of his last living child.)

CHAPTER THE NINTH

NOW, Judas knew that garden well, for our Saviour had often walked there, with his Disciples; and, almost at the moment when Our Saviour said these words, he came there, accompanied by a strong guard of men and officers, which had been sent by the chief Priests and Pharisees. It being dark, they carried lanterns and torches. They were armed with swords and staves too; for they did not know but that the people would rise and defend Jesus Christ; and this had made them afraid to seize Him boldly in the day, when he sat teaching the people.

As the leaders of this guard had never seen Jesus Christ and did not know him from the apostles, Judas had said to them, "The man whom I kiss, will be he." As he advanced to give this wicked kiss, Jesus said to the soldiers "whom do you seek?"—"Jesus of Nazareth," they answered. "Then," said Our Saviour, "I am He. Let my disciples here, go freely. I am He." Which Judas confirmed, by saying "Hail Master!" and kissing Him. Whereupon Jesus said, "Judas, Thou betrayest me with a kiss!"

The guard then ran forward to seize Him. No one offered to protect Him, except Peter, who, having a sword, drew it, and cut off the right ear of the High Priest's servant, who was one of them, and whose name was Malchus. But Jesus made him sheath his sword, and gave himself up. Then all the disciples forsook Him and fled; and there remained not one—not one—to bear Him company.

AFTER a short time, Peter and another Disciple took heart, and secretly followed the guard to the house of Caiaphas the High Priest, whither Jesus was taken, and where the Scribes and others were assembled to question Him. Peter stood at the door, but the other disciple, who was known to the High Priest, went in, and presently returning, asked the woman, who kept the door, to admit Peter too. She, looking at him said, "are you not one of the Disciples?" He said "I am not." So she let him in; and he stood before a fire that was there, warming himself among the servants and officers who were crowded round it. For it was very cold.

Some of these men asked him the same question as the woman had done, and said "are you not one of the disciples?" He again denied it, and said "I am not." One of them, who was related to that man whose ear Peter had cut off with his sword, said "Did I not see you in the garden with him?" Peter again denied it with an oath, and said, "I do not know the man." Immediately the cock crew, and Jesus turning round, looked stedfastly at Peter. Then Peter remembered what He had said—that before the cock crew, he would deny him thrice—and went out, and wept bitterly.

AMONG other questions that were put to Jesus, the High Priest asked Him what He had taught the people. To which He answered that He had taught them in the open day, and in the open streets, and that the Priests should ask the people what they had false witnesses coming in, said they had heard Him say that He could destroy the Temple of God, and build it again in three days. Jesus answered little; but the Scribes and Priests agreed that He was guilty of blasphemy, and should be put to death; and they spat upon, and beat Him.

When Judas Iscariot saw that His Master was indeed condemned, he was so full of horror for what he had done, that he took the Thirty Pieces of Silver back to the chief Priests, and said, "I have betrayed innocent blood! I cannot keep it!" With those Words, he threw the money down upon the floor, and rushing away, wild with despair, hanged himself. The rope, being weak, broke with the weight of his body, and it fell down on the ground, after Death, all bruised and burst—a dreadful sight to see! The chief Priests, not knowing what else to do with the Thirty Pieces of Silver, bought a burying-place for strangers with it, the proper name of which was The Potters' Field. But the people called it The Field of Blood ever afterwards.

Dickens Noted Most for His Descriptive Writing

Dickens was a superb descriptive writer. Therein lay his literary greatness—and he rarely reached the heights of description anywhere in his books, as in his openings.

Stevenson in his essay, "A Gossip on Romance," pays particular attention to the matter of openings. "For my part," he says, "I liked a story to begin with an old wayside inn, where 'toward the close of the year 17—' several gentlemen in three-cornered hats were playing at bowls" . . . "or give me a highwayman and I am full to the brim. The highwayman was my favorite dish. I can still hear that merry clatter of hoofs along the moonlit lane; night and the coming day are still related in my mind with the doings of John Rann or Jerry Abernaw; and the words 'postchaise,' the 'great North road,' 'cattle' and 'nag' still sound in my ears like poetry."

Dickens' descriptive passages have a sound in the ears "like poetry." But more, they have a smell in the nostrils, and a picture in the eye, and a feel to the flesh.

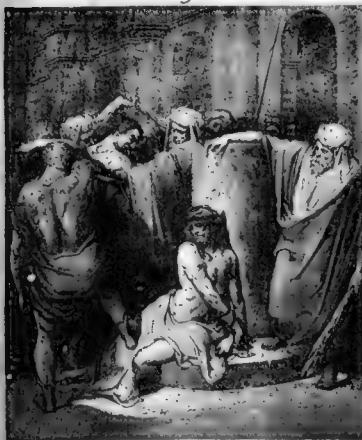

The statement that Dickens was the greatest of all descriptive writers (and especially openings) must be a considered one, for there are others of mighty status. Poe was one of them, and it is doubtful if there is anywhere in the language a passage blacker and bleaker, more laden with menace and forebodings than the opening passage of the "Fall of the House of Usher." Yet Poe, as a descriptive writer, lacked Dickens' versatile and all-inclusive sensory qualities.

YALE MARSCOT HIT IN CAMBRIDGE, HARVARD A. A. RECORD

POWER BACKS ELY'S POLICE KITT PLAN

Only Way to Combat Organized Crime, He Maintains

Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard University, today issued a statement in which he urged the Legislature to pass the police co-ordination measure placed before it by Gov. Ely.

Modern short arms, the sub-machine guns, the sawed-off shotguns and the automobiles have given the modern criminal a tremendous advantage that can only be offset by a highly organized constabulary under a single command, President Lowell said.

So long as the local police, however brave, active and co-operative, are under different commands, the gangster will escape through their nets, he added, and banditry will not be suppressed.

"What is needed to cope with the bandit is that all the police should have a similar idea as to how to take their part in their assigned places under a common plan; that every chief should know before hand just what to do when he receives his orders; and that the whole force, within the limits of the statute, should act under a single command at headquarters."

"This is the only way to stop the outrages now committed, and it is the object of the bill presented to the Legislature by the Governor. The measure, by placing the local bodies all the independent, considering each preparing for, and meeting, group crises and not clinging to local autonomy should swing against putting an end to a humiliating and horrible condition. The matter is now in the hands of the Legislature."

DIVORCES WHEN BY THE SCORE

More than a score of uncounted divorces were granted in the Probate Court to wives and husbands who claimed a variety of causes by their attorneys. Mr. Shirley Hick of Commonwealth ave., Brighton, testified that her husband, Joseph, began going to drink with other women after they were married, and then beat her and attempted to kill her when she spoke about it. She was given custody of her 8-year-old daughter.

When Mrs. Emma V. McNeil of Audubon rd., Back Bay, returned home one day in 1922 her husband, John, pushed her down stairs, pulled her hair and blackened both eyes when she objected to his going out with another woman.

A 19-year-old daughter, Catherine LaFrenier of Edgerly rd., Back Bay, asserted her mother, Mrs. Sara LaFrenier, to win a decree from the Probate Court on grounds of desertion. Mrs. LaFrenier said she found her husband and the other woman in Fitchburg.

Dog Saved, So Boy and Girl War Upon Police Is Ended

"Blackie" and his young owner James Malleck, nine, of Bowdoin st., Winthrop, were reunited today at the Winthrop dog pound—and further trouble from school boys and girls, who yesterday resented the dog officer's capture of the mongrel, was averted.

The frisky animal, impounded after he had excitedly nipped a girl while she was playing with him, was the central cause for a barrage of snowballs laid down on Winthrop police and Dog Officer Elmer Woods after the latter had refused to release the pup.

Woods had taken the dog to keep him in quarantine, but the youngsters feared that "Blackie" was to be executed.

Today the Malleck boy went to very wearily, as regarded his tale.

It was, and the dog will be turned over to Jimmy tomorrow when his quarantine period has ended, as he evidences no signs of rabies.

At noon today about 100 school children used part of the recess period to visit "Blackie" in the dog pound, and they carried with them enough bomb and tablet to feed 50 dogs.

"Blackie" fed well and took his tail very wearily, as regarded his tale.

At a result of what even the friends of the bill believe to have been an interpretive remark by Needham, the unwilling participants has been weakened instead of strengthened, it is conceded by others.

FREEBUG INKS

CONSPIRACY SCHEME

Testifies That He Was Promised $200 to Roze House

A fire bug's own story was unfolded today in Suffolk Superior Court before Judge Thomas J. Hammond, where a man and his son are on trial for being accessories before the burning of a Hyde Park house.

Morris Margolis, 35, of Westwood st., Dorchester, the confessed "torch," had previously pleaded guilty to setting the fire, and then Asst. Dist. Atty. Francis J. Hickey called him to the stand, to testify against Morris Aronson, 45, of Purcell ave., Hyde Park, who, Margolis says, hired him to set the fire, and Charles Aronson, 28, of Westboro.

Margolis declared he met Aronson at the Aronson "poultry slaughter house in East Cambridge, last July, and after several conversations about the poor condition of business, Morris Aronson proposed that he set fire to the house in Arlington st., Hyde Park, which the elder Aronson owned.

"I said he'd give me $200 to do the job," Margolis testified. "My wife and four children were hungry, and I was poor. He gave me $50 and the keys to the house."

"I went up to the attic, found some gas, piled them, threw some gasoline on them and lit them, with a match."

"I left the house and later returned. The house was still standing and I went in, as I promised the fire. It spread out."

"Aronson paid $125 after six or seven days, and then threatened to throw me out of his house when I said I was going to get a lawyer. I never got the entire $200."

The charge by Public Safety Commissioner Daniel Needham in opposition to the police unification bill sponsored by Gov. Ely comes from "thrusty politician afraid he will not be able to fix cases if someone else directs the local police force" has aroused bitter resentment among the solons on Beacon Hill.

As a result of what even the friends of the bill believe to have been an interpretive remark by Needham, the unwilling participants has been weakened instead of strengthened, it is conceded by others.

Rep. Philip G. Bowker of Brookline, of those accused by the charges, said:

"Believe Needham's statements are an insult to the intelligence and integrity of the members of the General Court."

RYAN EXPECTS DOG'S RETURN ON SATURDAY

Former Wired Puppy Is Now Receiving Best of Care

Lampy is bawling his head in shame more than that he is officially honoring his head in shame, actually he is merely trying to conceal a very ardent grin.

It's because the Harvard A. A. has discovered that Handsome Dan II, Yale's bulldog mascot, is somewhere near the precincts of the Yard, and the Lampoon editors must once more assume their old role of Know-Nothings.

Officially, the Lampoon staff insists to a man that it never even heard of Handsome Dan, or that he disappeared from Tompkins House at Yale, where some Harvard swimmers slept last Sunday night, or that he is in Cambridge now, or that he will be returned to the Yale Saturday night visit by the Crimson basketball team visits the North End tonight. No, sir, they just don't know a thing.

RYAN SMILES NEWS
If the Harvard A. A. thinks that a pair of Lampoon editors would turn dog snarlers, well, that simply justifies the Lampoon practice of calling the HAA the "Big Dog."

Why, the very thought is so silly that it reminds Lampy of the preposterous incident of the Sacred Cod just a year ago, or that plans what few over the Yale-Pinceton football war last fall with a big streamer reading: "Send Ryan Home to Harvard." It's just too impossible.

But Frank Ryan, the HAA's handout man, is quite positive about Dan. So positive, in fact, that he sent a wire to Malcolm Warner, Yale's athletic director, to find out if Dan was in Cambridge, that he was receiving the best of care and that he would be returned to his proper home.

It was a shabby trick, he said, to stall a dog that is valued at $100 when he is suffering from a very untended thing that is very smart, he said, because the dog was very shabby, too. While Yale undergraduates were scratching their heads in an attempt to think of a more untended thing that is very smart, he said, because the dog was very shabby, too. While Yale undergraduates were scratching their heads in an attempt to think of a more untended thing that is very smart, he said, because the dog was very shabby, too.

But Robert B. Murray, manager of the Harvard Lampoon, is a member of the Lampoon staff and Hasty Pudding police officer, still denies his team took the dog. Why, he's even looking up the law on libel.

Endorsement of Gov. Ely's proposed bill to unify and coordinate police agencies of Massachusetts was given today by the joint committee on the hearing next Monday.

Wife Loses Wrong Man Policy Suit

Mrs. Theresa DiPaolo, of Elmwood st., Somerville, was today told by the court that her $100,000 life insurance on her husband, an order of Judge Wilfred D. Gray, in Suffolk Superior Court.

The judge's decision brought suit on the grounds that a well man, taller and heavier than DiPaolo, took the physical examination on which the policies were issued. DiPaolo died shortly afterward. Exhumation of the body disclosed DiPaolo had taken the examinations. The case was suspended yesterday, and today the court made its finding.

Sollers Can Hit,
But He's as Clumsy
As Boone in Outfield

Babe Herman Stuck,
So There Is Some Hope for Sox Rookie

By AUSTEN LAKE

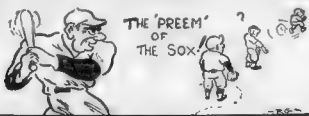

Sarasota, March 15.—Julius Sollers, who says the boys sometimes call him "Moose" because of his sloping shoulders and lumbering gait, has something of the heavy-browed appearance of Primo Carners, the freak boxing champion. Julius is distinctly of the freight-handler type of batters, who flicks his 37-ounce stick like a driver, a wrist hitter who gets a peculiar little twiddle at the top of his back swing, like Dick Porter of Cleveland, and slices the ball to tremendous distances.

There is no doubt that Sollers, on whom Bucky Harris is placing great faith to fill one of his outfield holes, is a natural hitter with a bright eye and quick reflexes. But he is just as awkward an outfielder, inclined to mix his feet and fish vaguely for balls over his head, a type, in short, of which the Red Sox have been all too familiar in past seasons. I am thinking particularly of Ike Boone, Roy Carlyle and Smead Jolley, men whose only baseball talent was flailing the ball and who were so many farm hands in the field.

Now, Sollers may not be so poor a fielder as Boone, Carlyle or Jolley, and certainly he cannot be any worse, because your Aunt Minnie, with her bustle and 16 under skirts, could cover an outfield patrol with more poise and agility than these three did for the Sox. So, for the moment Harris' fango hitters, Jack Onslow and Bob Falk, are taking turns hitting long drives and sending Sollers on galloping cruises to the far corners in the hope that they can grind some of the fine fielding arts into his system.

Blending Oliver and Sollers

The pity is that, in trading Tom Oliver and a package of cash for Julius who was the batting leader of the International League last year, some of Tom's great fielding skill could not have been transferred into Moose. For the combination of Oliver's fielding and Sollers' hitting would have produced the greatest centerfielder since Speaker's time. But, on the other hand, what a hopeless combination Tom's hitting and Julius' fielding would have made. It was always a question with us in arguing the respective merits of fielding and hitting, whether a clever ball-hawk like Oliver did not serve as effectively by saving 50 or 60 runs a season, as a fiddle-footed slugger who drove in twice that many and kicked them back again through outfield fumbles. Because in baseball a run saved is often as good as a run earned.

This spring the Sox are in position to sacrifice a spot of fielding strength to gain extra punch, and Harris is determined to go a long way with Big Julius, who he says should hit a cool .330 in his first season in the majors. For, although the giant is 28 and has played four years with Baltimore, he has never before been put to a major league test, an indication that scouts have noted his unworldliness and passed him by, just as they did for years with Jolley, who used to lead the Pacific Coast hitters year after year without ever getting within speaking terms of a big league contract until Chicago took a $75,000 gamble and lived to wish they hadn't.

Hitters of Sollers' type are in a distinct class, a kind of physical freak, who are poems of grace in the heavy-duty specialty of hitting but awkward and grotesque in other departments. There was that brawny youth named Tom Winstett with the Red Sox several seasons ago at Pensacola, who could hit screaming drives that would crash through the infielders' mitts or carom off the fences. And when young Toz came to bat the newsmen attached to the club were in an uproar of "Oh's" and "Ah's" and constantly writing home glowing reports about this find.

Herman Has Acquired Some Polish

But when Tom went into the outfield, which he did reluctantly, so that he sometimes had to be shagged out there by Shano Collins, he would snarl himself up in a tangle of arms and legs, often reaching for a fly ball and holding up his hands expectantly until it plopped onto the ground some 10 feet distant. And finally, after Shano took to locking the gates for fear the lad would run right out of the park, he shipped him prepaid to some village circuit from whence he never came back.

The minors are sprinkled with this type, as Buzz Arlett, who came up briefly with the Phillies, and Dale Alexander, who led the American League with the Red Sox in 1932. And there is Oscar Eckhart, who annually smashes all the fences on the Pacific Coast and who once spent a week-end in the Braves training camp. But Oscar, who is sudden death to all pitching on the Coast and never bats below .360, is doomed to spend the rest of his athletic life as a chronic minor leaguer, plowing up the outfield with his nose and getting his meat hand caught in his hip pocket.

Yet sometimes these hitting clotheshorns achieve enough polish to stay in fast company, as in Babe Herman's case. Because when Babe first came to Brooklyn the natives used to run daily pools on whether he would knock in or kick in the most run. Yet in time he became a fairly skillful fielder and went through each season with only two errors.

Harris is going to be patient with Sollers and put him through daily romps with his fango hitters, and if he can whittle down enough of his awkwardness, he knows that Big Julius will pay dividends by bombarding the outfield advertising and do the Red Sox a lot of good besides helping them.

CHELSEA FIVE FACES HARD STRUGGLE

By Bill Connell

Chelsea's Red Devils faced their major hurdle of the 1934 basketball campaign today, as they prepared for their clash with Bridgeport Central tonight at Cousens Gym, Tufts College, in the semi-finals of the N. E. Invitation court tourney.

Chelsea ruled only an even money bet today against Bridgeport, which showed tremendous power in trials, crushing South Portland by 43 to 13. True, that feat failed to give Bridgeport a chance to show its usual strength, for South Portland was outclassed.

NIGHTEN HOLDS UP

Yet the Maine five scored only three baskets as it trailed, indicating Bridgeport's fine defense, even as its winning margin showed scoring ability. Chelsea was a trifle below par as it spilled Manchester West out of the series, 35 to 18. Only Bob Nechem with his 15-point streak was outstanding for Chelsea. However, the team all season has been at its best against strong opposition. It was very likely that the competition this evening would put Chelsea to its peak.

In the other semifinal Bristol, Ct., was lined against Pawtucket, R. I. The latter upset the brilliant Westfield five, 30 to 26, in the best game of the trial round. Bristol had a soft time drubbing Spaulding, of Barre, Vt., 43 to 13.

BUSTLE SCREW

One result of that easy win was to send Bristol into the semifinals fresh as a daisy. And chances were that Pawtucket would relax a bit after the strain of edging Westfield. Thus setting the stage for a Bristol march into the finale of tomorrow evening. The major problem of this evening, then, seemed Chelsea's. With its loyal royal rosters roaring, it along the victory track, Chelsea had a slight advantage. Even though Bridgeport was to draw hundreds of fans to Medford for the conflict.

Ruthin, Berger Out As Clubs Tee Off At St. Pete

By Joe Cushman

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16.—Real baseball comes to the Sunshine City today with the opening of the annual Braves-Yankees series, oldest of grape-fruit league rivalries.

Eight games, one less than last season, are carded in all. Time was when a dozen tilts were staged, and each before a capacity crowd. The attendance fell off considerably the past few years, but jacking from the record breaking gatherings at 17,000 to 20,000, the turnout will be a merit at every contest this year.

For the first time in three years, Babe Ruth is signed and ready to play the opener for the Yankees, but Wally Berger, the Braves greatest gate attraction, will be missing from the Boston lineup.

The Warriors' home-run king has surrendered in his 11-day battle to the extent of reporting this searing a fine of $20 daily but not having had a bat or glove in his hand since last fall, he'll not be set to play before the first of next week.

Berger has recovered fully from his appendicitis operation in Boston last November and is looking great after a winter of golf and swimming at Miami. Three days, he contends, will put him in shape to play.

He will not talk about his salary argument until he has a conference with Judge Fuchs, but he is confident that unless he is satisfied, he'll go home to California. It's our guess, however, that he wouldn't have come here unless he intended to sign. We'll be greatly surprised if he isn't in the lineup against Ruth and Co. next Tuesday.

The supporting cast will include Jordan at first, Gyselman at second, Whitney at third, Urickski at short, Thompson in center, Moore in left and Worthington in right. Rabbit Maraville will play every other game at the keystone sack, while Hal Lee will split Worthington in the garden on alternates days. All is set for Umpire Bill Stewart to order "play ball."

WHAT SOME REDUCED-PRICE CIGARS CLAIM...

Bayuk GUARANTEES

Bayuk "Phillies" is not a regular 5c cigar value. Neither is it a former 10c cigar reduced in size or quality to sell for 5c.

Bayuk "Phillies"—at 5c—is exactly the SAME cigar—in quality, size and shape—as when it was the largest-selling 10c brand in America. We not only claim it . . . we guarantee it.

This guaranteed 10c value for 5c makes the vast difference that separates "Phillies" from other cigars in its price class. It's the reason why more millions of men smoke "Phillies" than any other cigar on the market.

Have YOU tried Bayuk "Phillies"? If not—smoke one today. It will give you a new idea of cigar value for 5c. Look for the box of "Phillies" on your dealer's counter—and read Bayuk's Guarantee printed in the blue strip on the lid.

Bayuk's Guarantee

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (famously known as "Philadelphia Hand-made") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America. Bayuk guarantees that this cigar today—5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Domestic and Havana long-filler. It's the same identical cigar.

Mr. Boston Says:

Heavy Boxing Menu
Three Wrestling Cards
Pity the Promoters

By Jack Conway

I PRESUME OUR intellectual boxing and wrestling promoters know their own business best, but it would appear to me as a casual observer that they have a rather crowded sports calendar for next week.

My social secretary has furnished me with a list of spots where I am expected to drop in. Here's my calling list:

Monday—Try-out bouts for New England amateur boxing championships, Arena.
Tuesday—H. vs. Steve Haskins, and Jackie Davis vs. Jimmy Leto, Goodwin A. C. show, Arena.
Wednesday—Charles Gordon wrestling show, Thompson's Building.
Thursday—Vic Dundee vs. Al McCoy, Shaver A. C. show, Mechanics Building.
Friday—Hearl DeGue vs. Earl McCracken, Paul Bowser wrestling show, Boston Garden.

My social secretary mentioned that if I survived this schedule I might wish to recuperate by waiting a few guided spots on Saturday night.

Spring Tonic for Sports

PERHAPS OUR sports promoters feel boxing and wrestling require a spring tonic, and they are going to hand it out in large doses. I can remember when there was a boxing show every night in Boston, and every club made money. Unfortunately there is not so much money in the hands of old John Public as was the case in those carefree days. I have an idea some of the show booked for next week are going to suffer financially. This is not because they are not first class offerings, but rather on account of the fact the fans will have to pick their attraction.

Hockey will also offer a show at the Garden on Tuesday night when the Bruins and Cubs play a game for the Emergency Campaign Fund.

The handicaps, estate, federal government and athletes will benefit as a result of the new desire to promote sports.

The Goodwin A. C. and Shaver A. C. were much obliged to pay the state $800 for their license. There is also a 5 per cent state tax on tickets for boxing shows.

The federal government will receive a 10 per cent tax on all tickets sold for boxing, wrestling and hockey.

When the athletes are paid off, the promoters will consider themselves fortunate if they have enough cash left to take a dinner to a small gathering.

Jimmy Leto Comes Here

I AM particularly interested to get a peek at Jimmy Leto, class lightweight, who is coming with Jackie Davis on a round bout at the Goodwin A. C. show at the Arena on Tuesday night. I have frequently read accounts of Leto's prowess in search of new talent, and some from Tampa, Fla. He boxed at Hartford, Conn., and has done most of his boxing in Holyoke and West Springfield rings. He has repeatedly drawn appreciative crowds to the arena where he has boxed, and indicates he has true merit. Otherwise the fans would not have supported him.

I am told Leto is an aggressive, two-fisted scrapper who keeps hitting his punches by every second he is in the ring. Davis recently gave Andy Callahan a terrific session at Worcester, and is confident he will stop the rush of Leto.

Movies of Dundee Bait

DICK DUNN announces there will be movie of the Vince Dundee-Al McCoy bout, which will be staged at Mechanics Building on next Thursday night. Dundee has been his usual movie rights for $20,000. If that movie rights value, time will be particularly valuable.

Dunn announced he has disposed of the radio rights for the fight.

With Jessie Corbett heading his list of ticket sellers, movie camera clicking and with a radio boom, Mrs. Dunn's multi-millionaire boys installed plenty of fire into his first Shaver A. C. promotion.

NEW ENGLAND PING PONG LURES TENNIS STARS

True to Form

By Burris Jenkins, Jr.

HELEN JACOBS, VIRGINIA RICE IN TOURNEY

The first New England ping-pong tournament was on the program today to open at the West End House with 128 ping-pong players along the championly road.

W. Chester Wells of New York, famed as the exponent of the pen holder grip, seeded No. 1, ruled the favorite to ping to its throne. Entrants for this tourney were listed from five states, with many state and sectional champions in the grid.

Crown contenders included Joe Filipek, the Massachusetts state champion; Julian Weiss, Harvard; Wallace Yer, Boston; Jack Kyger of Yale, and Malcolm Bell. In the ladies' division, which gets under way tomorrow afternoon, there will be an array of tennis stars which includes Mrs. George W. Wallis, Helen Jacobs, Virginia Rice, Marjorie Sachs and Mrs. Robert Morris.

Another leading player, Amy Sigman, ranked sixth in the East is seeded. One who has been watching are Edna Grynbaum, the 1932 Massachusetts state champion; Barbara Skoda, the Simmons captain; Elizabeth Smith, the Cambridge resident.

Visiting Clubs Set Ice Loop Record

By Bill Grimes
Years ago, one of the boys "on the inside" sent out the hot tip that in all N. H. L. conflicts the home team has a decided advantage, and from then on the visiting clubs have always been the short-changers, regardless of their ability.

Under this system, the "boys" did all right by themselves until last night, when, to the chagrin of the home team, they came through with victories, thereby establishing an all-time record for upsets.

Down in New York, Bruins slipped to a defeat on Rangers. Americans beat Ottawa in the Canadian capital by the same score. Detroit knocked off Canadiens 4 to 1 in the Montreal Forum, and Chicago Blackhawks handed Maple Leafs their second setback of the season in Toronto.

Capt. Marty Barry and big Neil Stewart, the Bruins' scoring ace, scored Boston through to a victory over the Blue Shirts. Assisted by Dit Clapper and Eddie Shore, Barry produced the first Boston goal. After Bill Cook had scored the equalizer, Neil Stewart, with the aid of his sidekick, Red Beatie, scored twice in the third period in less than one minute.

The Boston won prevented Rangers from clinching second place.

With only one more game to play, Canadiens and Maroons are tied for second place. In the event they lose their final game of the year, Boston's record will be 10 wins, 10 losses and 10 ties.

With Jessie Corbett heading his list of ticket sellers, movie camera clicking and with a radio boom, Mrs. Dunn's multi-millionaire boys installed plenty of fire into his first Shaver A. C. promotion.

Maranville Tells of Spectacular Collapse of 1921 Buccos

By Walter J. Maranville
CHAPTER XI
After nine seasons with the Braves, I was traded to Pittsburgh in January, 1921, for Billy Southworth, Fred Nicholson and "Dinty" Barbera. It was also reported that the Boston club received $15,000 in the transaction.

Naturally, I wasn't pleased. I had never known any other big league home except the Hub and had hoped to spend my entire career there. But there is nothing a ball player can do in such a case but go where he is sent.

And as much as I have always loved Boston, I can't say I have ever regretted my stay with the Braves. Both the management and the fans treated me handsomely.

My first contract with the Braves called for $15,000, or $20,000 more than I received from the Braves the year before. I was drawing down $15,000 in 1924, my last season in Smokey town.

A player hasn't much to kick about when he's connected with a club that dishes out that kind of which reduced our lead to six games.

Then we went to the Polo Grounds for four games with the second-place Giants. The morning we arrived in New York there was an army of photographers around to snap the "new champions."

We posed, much against my wishes. Then the McGrawmen stepped out and beat us four straight.

WORST FLOT
We still had a two-game lead and were going home to close the season. But we had shot our bolt. By Labor Day we were in second place to stay, after the worst flop in the history of the game.

"When in doubt, blame the Rabbits," being having been a popular slogan. I had held responsible for the collapse of the Conzales.

The know-it-all boys had it that Charlie Grimm and I had been burning the candle at both ends and had wrecked the morale of the entire outfit.

Those on the inside knew the charges were false.

Grimm was never a playboy in the history of the game.

Queen Sonja Has Ability and It

By Walter Kiley
Sonja, of twinkling eye and enticing smile, has already captivated Boston. Sonja Henie queen of the ice, toast of royalty in the world's leading capitals, a simple little heart-faced Norwegian maid of 21 summers, lovable, brimming with personality, recently received the unqualified stamp of approval. It isn't beauty that carries the appeal. Sonja is too wholesome looking to be merely beautiful. It's just those tricky little dimples which come and go with fascinating regularity. Neither is it the way she looks at you, direct and warming, nor the way she wears her sleek and crested, beehive-shaped hat, which makes her look so sweetly stop her lacy hair.

Whatever it is, she has it. You know her as an outstanding personality even though you were ignorant of her eight world figure skating championships, and her two Olympic titles. She has that certain something which makes for friends with both men and women which lifts her high above the rank and file of ordinary mortals.

THE "DYING SWAN"
Tonight and tomorrow night, you will see for yourself. You will find out why the Boston Arena has been virtually sold out as Sonja pirouettes through the dirt floor and graceful steps of Pavlova's "Dance of the Dying Swan," feature of the great carnival being put on for the benefit of the Children's Hospital.

I hope Boston likes my "Swan Dance," she declared shyly. "I saw Pavlova and I said to myself, there is nothing like her. I will try to be skater. Not in new, darling and graceful. If I can come near Pavlova's perfection, I will be happy."

I work hard, long hours and I practice eight to ten hours a day and I study for two seasons in Copenhagen's great Russian ballet school in London.

"They like me in Paris, London and Milan. But I worry about me in the United States. I go back to my old time waiters which they like before."

"But everybody seems to want to make things out of the Dying Swan" so I try not. I was very nervous. But I never skated better, and I got almost as perfect as I can get. Let me make me very happy."

Tonight, I hope to show that finish and poise that has made Pavlova better than the best. Let me make things out of the Dying Swan so I try not. I was very nervous. But I never skated better, and I got almost as perfect as I can get. Let me make me very happy."

RICARDO CORTEZ STAYS "VILLAIN" in Warner Vehicle -- Paramount-Fenway Have "MOVIE JOURNAL OF A CRIME"

Bette Davis to Be His Leading Lady in Coming "Beware of Imitations" Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Metropolitan Picture Editor, Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 14—Suppose there is something in being a GOOD villain. Ricardo Cortez, try as he will to get out of being the suave, polished gentleman who is always on the wrong side of the law, just cannot dodge his public's preference. They demand him as a villain and that's all there is to it.

Jack Warner has arranged for Cortez to play the title role in "Beware of Imitations," based on an original by Carl Erickson.

The picture was first called "Mona Lisa" and deals with a racial who sells phony antiques. Ricky Gals Bette Davis for his leading lady and here's hoping Bette will give a really well performance.

O. O. McIntyre's tribute to my favorite, Louella O. Parsons. He Louella Watson is eloquent enough to give us an idea of her appeal in "No More Ladies." Recent news that we can see her in this play ourselves. I guess, on the scene, Marjorie Golden-Mayer very wisely have bought the screen rights of "No More Ladies" and they are putting the elegant Franchot Tone into the leading male role with Miss Watson. It is the classic-wait, Mary Boland, Alton Seltzer, and a Marjorie Drexler attention! You will have a treat.

In Philippe Holmes all signed and sealed and ready for delivery to his fiancée? If not, he'd better look out. Mary Brian has been signed for the lead opposite him in "In Conference" at Paramount for Charles Rogers, and a new picture for the Brian gal is just as apt as not to meet a new romance. Mary, just back from a fast plane trip to New York during which she detoured by way of San Francisco to see Dick Powell and was met at the station by Buddy Rogers—gave an opportunity to show her stuff as a sophisticate in "In Conference."

Norma Shearer will never receive a finer compliment than the one paid her by Ernest Underwood, Columbia's radio vice expert and the man who knows all about the demon microphone. "She is what I call a real lady," he said, "the way she dresses, the way she talks and the way she acts."

And we'll just add our postscript and say we never realized what a grand speaking voice Herbert Marshall had until we appeared with us in the Norma Shearer program on the radio. As for Norma, is that gal a trouper?

Chatter in Hollywood

I'd like to know and so would a dozen other people whether Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard have had a lovers' spat? It's probably all paid up by this time, but Charlie has been going it alone all this week. He was on the boulevard one night and another night in the Coconut Grove, sitting with a man companion, watching the dancing and looking just a little more wistful than usual.

Wonder if "Grand Canary" will make as exciting a picture as A. J. Cronin's novel? Zita Johann, some way, tie into these exotic tales of faraway lands. Maybe that is why Jess LaRue paged her to play opposite Warner Baxter. The rest of the lineup in Marjorie Ransome and John Halliday with Irving Cummings directing. I hope Monsieur Laszlo won't change the title as he threatens. Why buy a popular novel?

A Line or Two

Virginia Gilbert, dove up in the very latest spring clothes was on the MGM lot today talking pictures. You see, her contract with MGM was only suspended at the time she married Jack Gilbert and so you will be seeing her in Virginia Gilbert but Virginia is Bruce in the movies again. What a lot of excitement Ruth Chatterton's plan to go to New York Friday has caused. George Brent is to be accompanying her at this time because of his friendship with her. Virginia Gilbert is like an avalanche came the same day. I don't know. But even known language Ruth and George have denied them. The John Weavers (Peggy Wood) never play separated very long. These two have been married for years and years and often Peggy goes to London to see her. John remains on some special writing job. But sooner or later they get together. He is headed in the direction now to be with her while she makes her picture at Fox.

SOLVE CODE MESSAGE

Here's a job for all amateur detectives—young and old! Everyone of us has thought at one time or another that we had a little bit of Sherlock Holmes in us—and this is the chance to prove it.

It's no less than an opportunity to solve the problem that now faces Secret Agent X-9, the hero of the great detective adventure strip that runs every day in the Boston American.

Today's installment of Secret Agent X-9 shows that the detective has taken some papers from the 'false French detective.' Those papers are important. They contain the information Secret Agent X-9 needs to solve the mystery. But the information is written in code and must be deciphered.

You can join to solve the puzzle. Tomorrow's installment of Secret Agent X-9 will show the code message. And we'll give you the clues on how to decipher it. They are exactly the same clues that Secret Agent X-9 will use. See if you can decipher the message before the correct answer appears in the strip next week. All who try it will find out just how good they are as real detectives.

So be sure to get tomorrow's Boston American and see the code and the clues for deciphering it.

The Law's Delay

By L. MAURICE WORMSER

Professor of Law at Fordham University; Former Editor-in-Chief of the New York Law Journal; Author of Noted Legal Commentaries and Case Books; and Now Serving as Chairman of Special Committee Against the Law's Delays of the Federal Bar Association of New

DISCONTENT with the administration of the law is not new. In England it goes back to the time of Jack Cade's rebellion, when the people planned to kill the judges and lawyers first. Shakespears ridiculed legal methods repeatedly. Hamlet was so thoroughly convinced of the "law's delay" that he preferred to settle matters outside of court. Dickens wrote about the uncertainty and procrastination of the law. As a matter of fact, lame and halting Justice has been a figure familiar for many generations.

In England, reform was brought about THROUGH THE EFFORTS OF DISGUSTED LAYMEN, assisted by the newspapers, particularly The Westminster Review and the London Spectator. They attacked the anomalies in jurisdiction, the absurdities in the rules of evidence, technicalities in pleading and indictments, unnecessary causes of delay, and the cost of litigation.⁶

Two novelists lent powerful help—Samuel Warren in "Ten Thousand a Year," and Charles Dickens in "Bleak House" and other books. Dickens, himself educated as a lawyer and a member of the Inner Temple, immortalized the absurdities of Chancery procedure in Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce, and poked fun at the lawyers and judges whom he charged with responsibility for the abuses and delays. THE LAWYERS AND JUDGES ONLY GOT ON BOARD THE TRAIN AFTER IT HAD STARTED.

IN order for the Federal Bar Association to succeed in its present efforts to provide MORE JUSTICE AND LESS DELAY AND RED TAPE, it is essential to secure lay support on a large scale. Judges and lawyers will never do anything substantial in the way of reform except UNDER THE

It is true that the law reform committees composed of judges, lawyers and the like, parade many great names. But, they labor and labor, their reports are delayed three years and more, and thousands upon thousands of dollars of the people's money are expended—and what is produced? A umorous mouse, a little mouse, with a feeble, half extinguished squeak. It does no good for these highly touted committees to dabble with this or that minor procedural reform. It is necessary that THE ENTIRE ADMINISTRATION OF THE LAW must be revamped from start to finish, from top to bottom.

In the Poor Man's Courts the delays today constitute a complete denial of Justice. It is amazing to learn that the Central Jury Tort Calendar of the Municipal Court, Borough of Manhattan, is approximately 39,000 cases behind. This is the court which deals with small actions for personal wrongs and negligence, involving not over $1000.

Such a case, noticed for trial for the January, 1934, term bears the calendar number 93,398. Turning to the Day Calendar, we find that for February 5, 1934, Case number 54,447 is the first case. Thus we see that the Central Jury Tort Calendar is 39,000 cases behind. Over two years delay! Just think of it! And this is what they call a Poor Man's Court!!

How foolish the LAWYERS AND JUDGES are not to cure this appalling evil, not to clean out this mess, before it is too late. Practically viewed, there is every reason why LAWYERS should roll up their sleeves, seize the axe tight, and chop out the unsound, unwholesome, unsavory growth of delay and mismanagement which is now eating like a cancer into the very heart of the legal body.

Otherwise the big bad wolf of bright red ink will grow soon in the neighborhood of the lawyer's office, for what client will litigate in the face of such heart-breaking delay? By the time their actions are reached, they often are dead, the witnesses have vanished, or the case has become worthless.

ON December 29, 1933, a Brooklyn attorney wrote to the president of the Federal Bar Association, praising the stand which the association fearlessly had taken with regard to the congested court calendars, and said that nobody realized what this condition really means until it strikes home. He gave a concrete example of something that recently happened in his

"On August 10, 1930, the plaintiff was seriously injured while falling down a defective stairway. I promptly brought action against the owner, issue was joined, and the case placed upon the calendar.

"I noticed in the Law Journal today that the case is only on the reserve calendar for January, and would not be reached until some time in the early part of February, 1934."

"The plaintiff died this year and never had an oppor-

The death of the plaintiff automatically ended the case and with it a complete loss to the injured party. That result was not only a denial of justice, but it creates general dissatisfaction in the community, and a lack of faith in our legal system. Certainly it does not conform to the "New Deal."

LAWYERS' and judges' palliatives will accomplish nothing. PUBLIC PATIENCE IS AT AN END. The stables must be cleaned out. We must start afresh.

Three months is the outside limit of time in which a case should be tried if Justice is to be done.

Without an efficiently administered system of Justice, run in a sensible, speedy and businesslike manner, no community is the keystone of the arch of Good Government. Tried in the balance, the layman has found that the present system of law administration does not "work." To make it "work" is his business.

But much more is necessary than to spray a little disinfectant into the stagnant pool of Justice. The pool itself must be rebuilt, the poisonous germs destroyed and the weeds eradicated.
